Dear Professor:

Your name is on the top of my list of people whom I must write. I received a nice Easter card from Prof. Eiler and its receipt served to remind me again to write you.

Dear John:

This (short) note does not seem to fulfill my obligation — only to forward to you

It was very nice indeed to get your Easter greetings.

I was delighted to hear that you like your job and are obviously busy in the middle of our problems. Since I am preparing a lecture before the New York Bar, on German cartels, I can make immediate use of your report on Switzerland.

I hope you come to Washington soon to see us. I would like to show you how my plans are developing.

With best personal regards, yours,

He asked to be remembered by you as did his wife.

Please excuse this as the penmanship leaves much to be wanted but I am dashing it off in a hurry here at the office.

My promised letter will follow shortly but in the interim please give my best to all our friends at Georgetown to your wonderful wife and family.

Yours

Dear Professor:

Your name is on the top of my list of people whom I must write. I received a nice Easter Card from Prof. Eiler and its receipt served to remind me again to write you.

This short note does not serve to fulfill my obligation — only to forward to you a copy of a publication we receive here which has in it some comments on Swiss cartel legislation & thought you might be interested in.

I had the pleasure of meeting Herr Frankl from the Süddeutschebank at a cocktail party here 2 weeks ago. He asked to be remembered ~~to~~^{to} you as did his wife.

Please excuse this as the penmanship leaves much to be wanted but I am dashing it off in a hurry here at the office.

My promised letter will follow shortly but in the interim please give my best to all my friends at Georgetown, to your wonderful wife and family.

Yours
